

After last week's tutorial, I decided to pursue the line of enquiry in to the stickers I noticed between all the shops on Wood Green High St.

I'm curious about them and I think it makes me question whether this is customising, valdalisng? Business promotion? It makes the high street function almost as a long noticeboard. I decided to document further and explore both the content and visuals.

I decided to walk the whole stretch of road between Turnpike Lane and Wood Green, capturing each cluster of stickers along the route on both sides of the street.

The stickers all seem to be advertising shutter install and repair businesses.

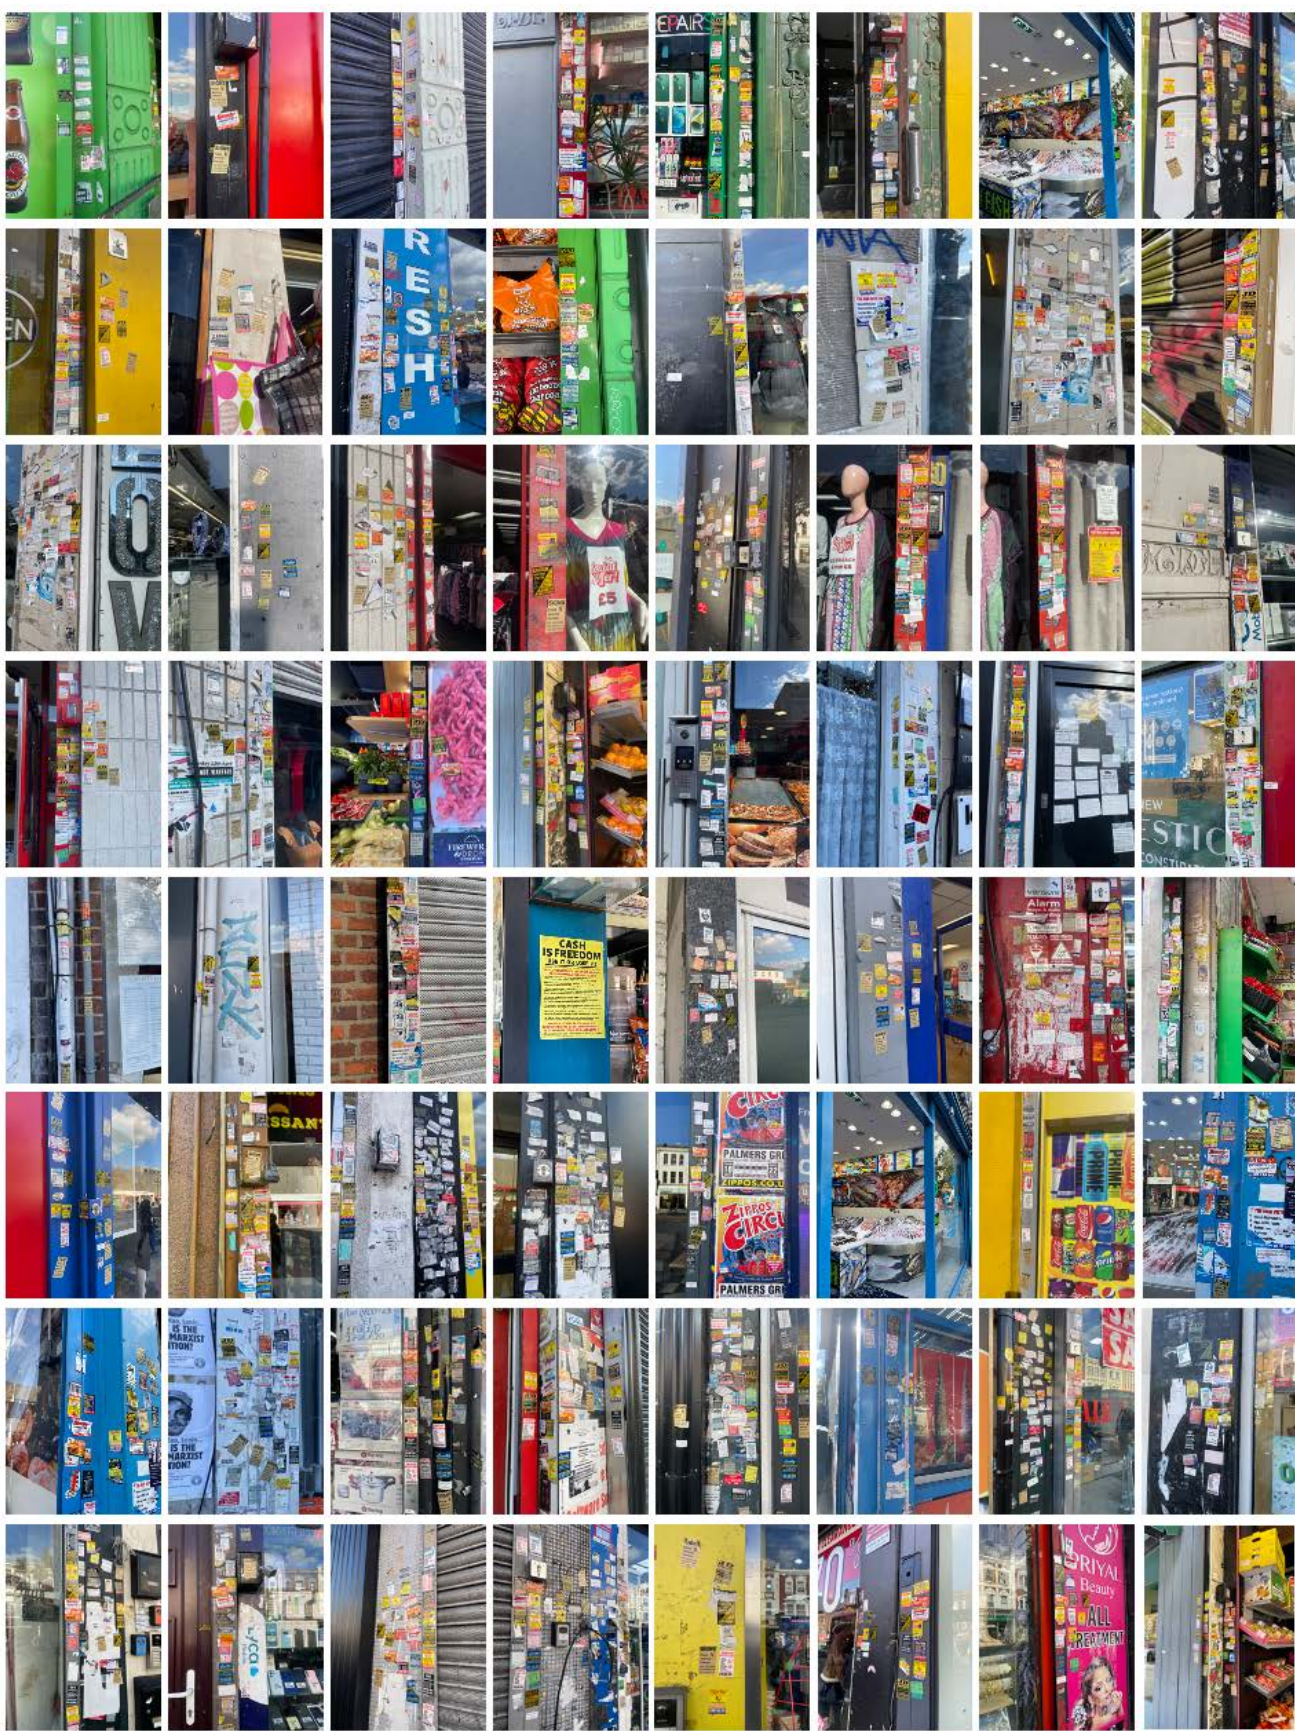

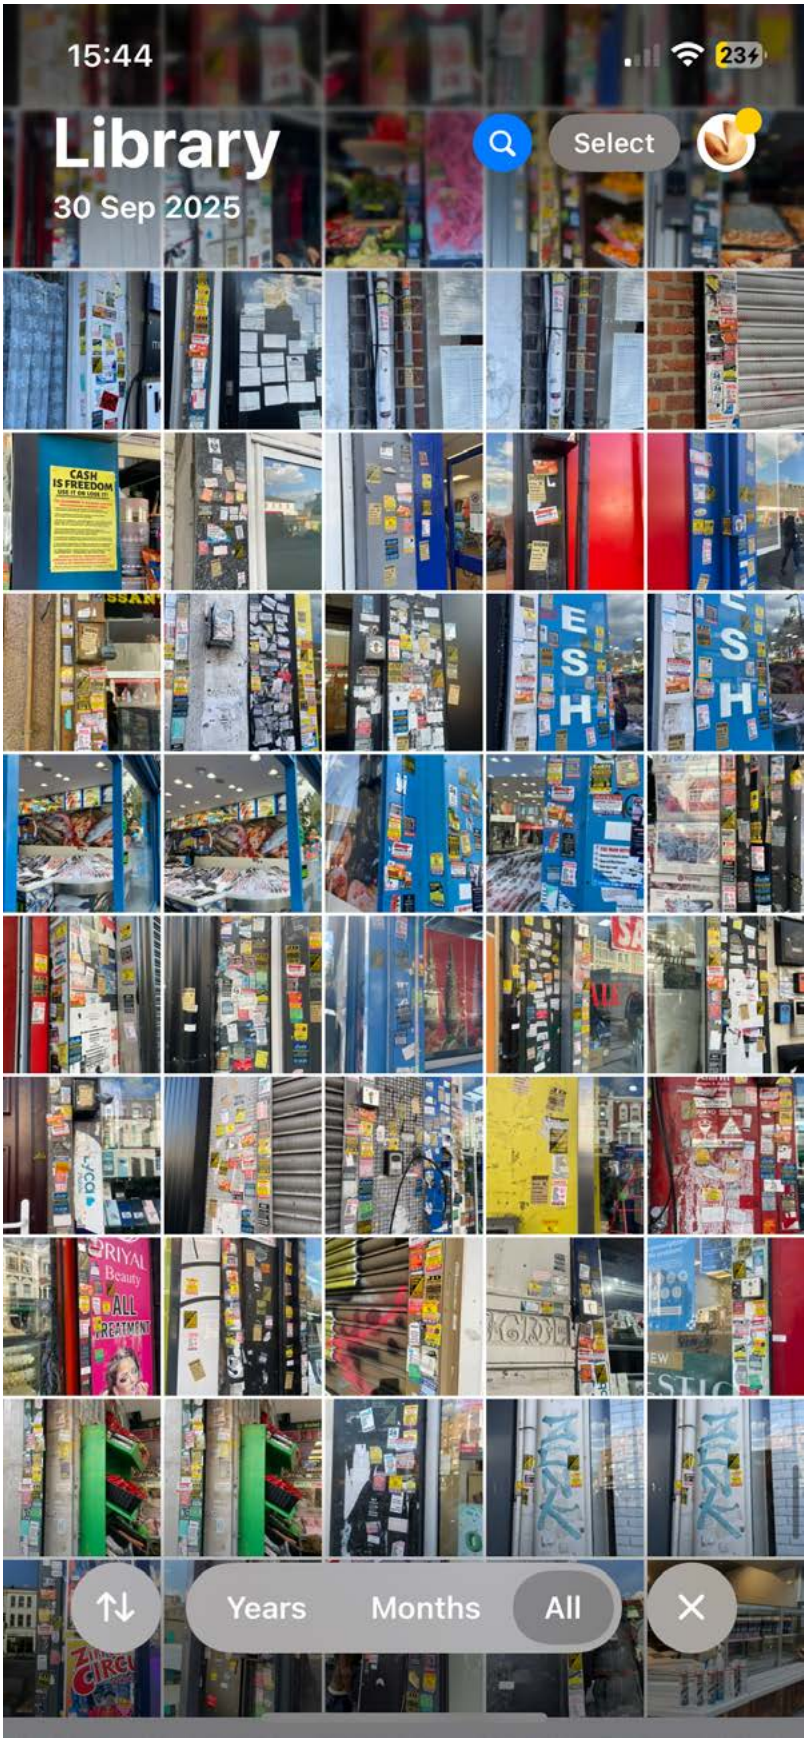

When taking pictures of the stickers on the walls and pipes, it made me notice more details, such as ornate tiles that had been painted over, chewing gum, written graffiti or things that were happening in shop windows.

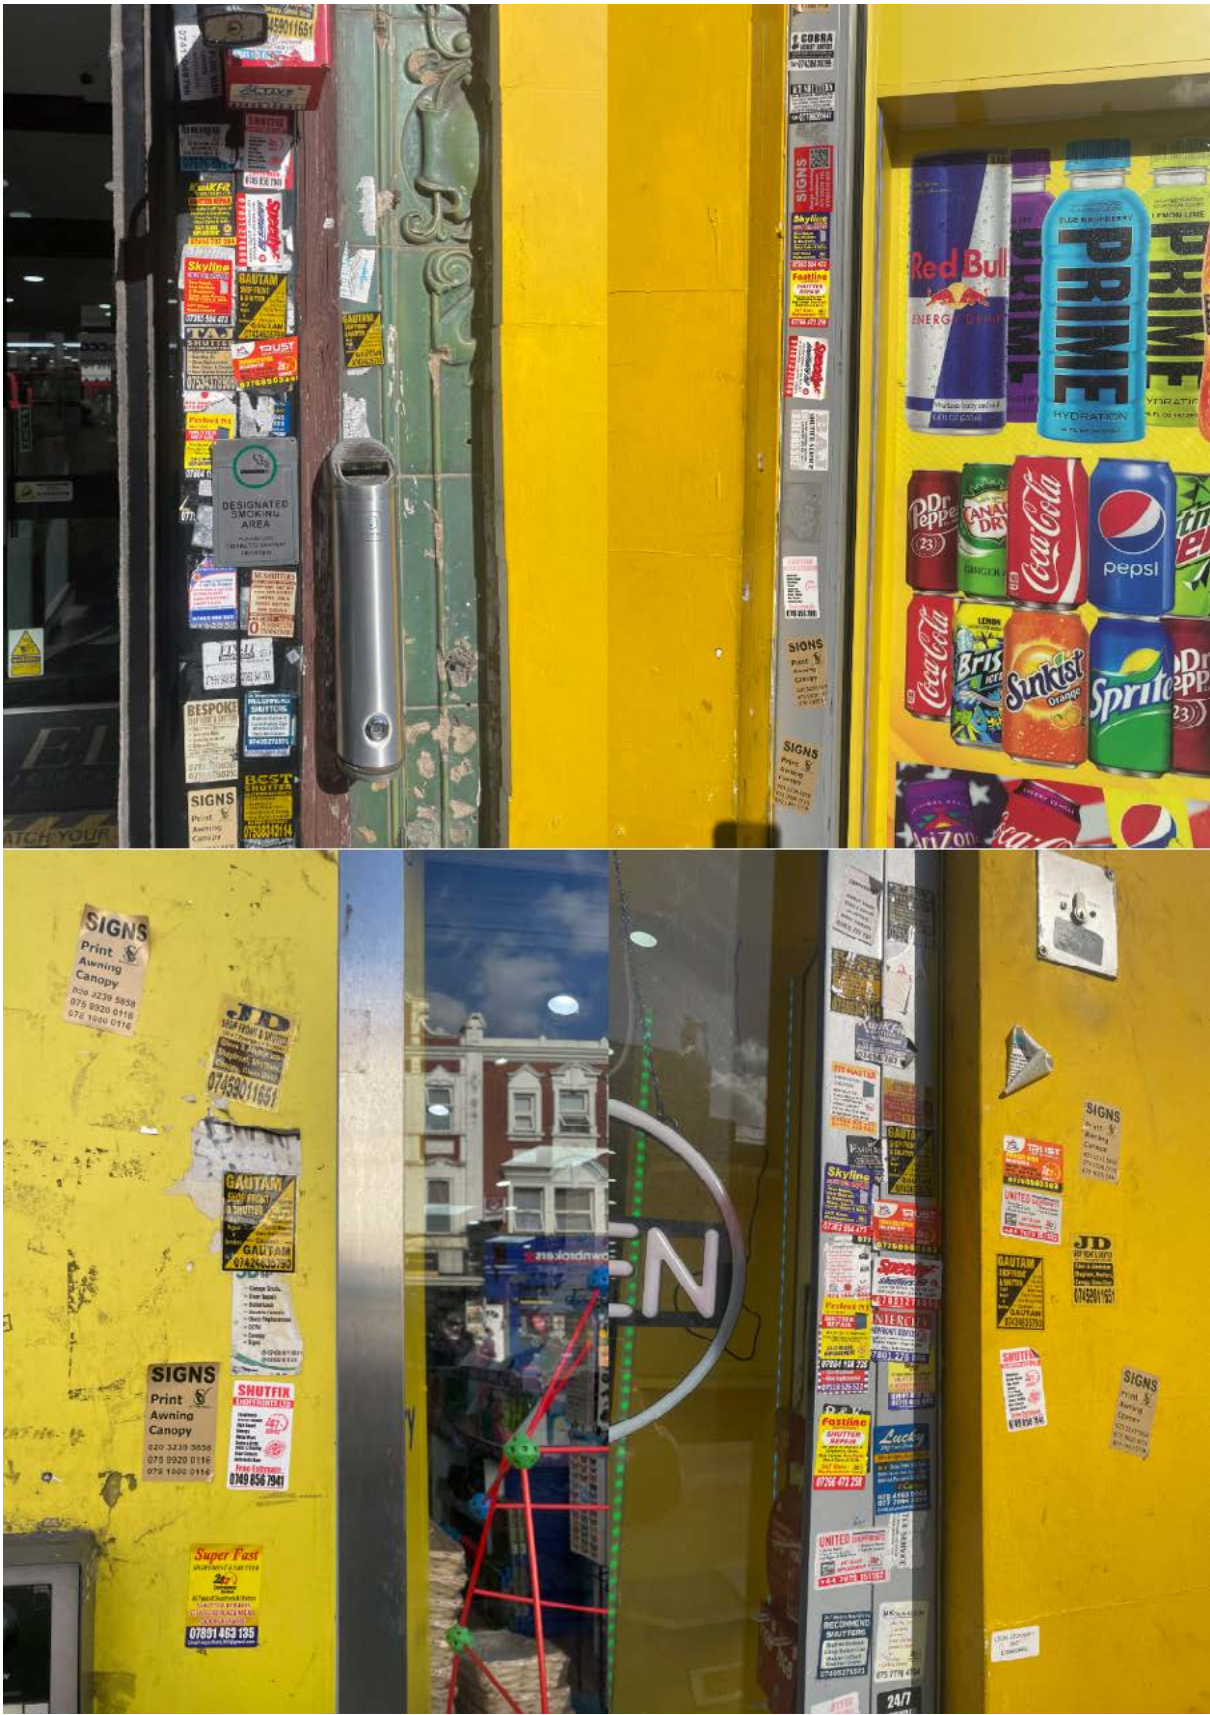

A selection of the stickers. Only two outliers that are not shutter related companies.
Predominant colours include- yellow: 9, black: 9, red: 13, blue: 6, purple: 2, green: 2

After taking all the photos I was interested by how they looked visually in the camera roll on my phone.

I wanted to experiment visually with the images, categorising and reprocessing
